

Professor Simon B. Jones-Hendrickson

Dr. Simon B. Jones-Hendrickson, Professor of Economics, University of the Virgin Islands (UVI), is a national of St. Kitts and Nevis. He delivered the Eastern Caribbean Central Bank, National Bank of Dominica and UWI Open Campus Lecture titled “Size and Survival in the Era of Globalization.”

He is currently the Dean (Interim) of the College and Liberal Arts & Social Sciences, UVI. He has been teaching and writing in Economics for over 35 years.

Previously, he taught at the University of the West Indies, Kingston, Jamaica and has written extensively on Caribbean Economics, Public Sector Economics, Political Economy and Quantitative Economics. He has five books on Economics and Political Economy. He received his training in Economics from Exeter University, England; Illinois State University, USA; and the College of the Virgin islands.

Professor Jones-Hendrickson has been a consultant to Caribbean governments; is a long-term consultant to the government of St, Kitts and Nevis; was Ambassador of St. Kitts and Nevis to the OECS, CARICOM and the ACS (and still serves in a roving basis). He has been a Commissioner on Tax and Administration Reform and Public Expenditure Reform for the OECS, among other issues. He is also a creative writer having written five novels and two volumes of poetry.

He is married to physician, Dr. Cora Christian and they have two children, an Attorney and a Banker.